From the Galileo Galilei International Airport in Pisa by means of the superhighway, one arrives, after about 30 km, in the municipality of Capannoli and from here in the direction of the turreted city of Volterra, crossing an agricultural territory of unquestionable scenic beauty, one arrives in the municipality of Terricciola. After a further 10 km or so, just before reaching Lajatico, the birthplace of the maestro Andrea Bocelli, we turn off the Volterrana provincial road to follow a farm road, which crosses fields planted with wheat until we reach the entrance to the property. From here, the private road that descends gently, overcoming a difference in height of about two meters, which leads us to the parking area placed in the shade of an imposing pine tree more than 30 meters high, while the farm road continues skirting the park of the farmhouse bordered by tall trees to the east, creating a sort of natural amphitheater, which slopes gently towards the river Era.
